Convict Labor.
On the 1st of January next the letting of convict labor by contract in the penal institutions of California will cease. When Gov. Perkins assumed the duties of the executive office he applied himself to the task of discovering or suggesting proper employment for the convicts which should not work an injustice on the free skilled laborer. His conclusions were embodied in a message to the Legislature, and the latter at once appropriated funds for the erection of buildings and the purchase of machinery necessary to carry out the plans. The buildings are now up and the machinery is, and on Jan. 1st the Warden of San Quentin put 1,500 prisoners to work on the manufacture of jute bagging and bags, of which there is an immense consumption on the Pacific coast. Millions of these bags are imported annually, and only an insignificant number are manufactured, principally by Chinese labor. Thus, under Gov. Perkins' plan, this industry in San Quentin will compete with no free white labor, while it will supply an article in constant and large demand.

The Sun says: The Princeton students seem to have recommended the disgraceful rowdiness which brought the college into such disrepute some time since. Shortly before the Christmas vacation some of them damaged the property of various students, besides that of a Mr. Swann, and caused great inconvenience to the railroad authorities by greasing the rails. So much indignation was aroused that legal proceedings were seriously threatened, and the town authorities were anxious that the railroad people should join them in the prosecution. The only notice taken by the college was to suggest to the misbehaving students the expediency of a few days absence. In fact, discipline has become of the basest character, and it is asserted in the case of influential students there is absolutely none enforced.

UNCLE BEN JO'S
GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN PA ACEA.

UNCLE BEN JO was born in Boston, in 1800. Being a botanist, he effected many wonderful cures with roots and herbs. In 1844 he went to South America to study botany, and while there accidentally made his great discovery. The natives of this country were quite familiar with it, and had always supposed it to be a poisonous herb, which they used for the sole purpose of keeping snakes away from their tents or houses. This they did by laying it in a circle about the same as a proper distance off. This herb, Uncle Jo, as well as the natives, considered a very obnoxious and poisonous one, and when green and fresh it threw off a very disagreeable and repulsive odor. The herb grows about two feet high, and about eight inches of the top part of its stalk is leafless, and this part tops over and hangs downward perpendicularly, and from its curved neck to its end it increases in size, and on the end of the same is a large, burly-looking ball, which stalk and ball, in this hanging position, looks precisely like the tongue of a bell. Hence Uncle Jo named it "Bell Tongue Plant." In South America this herb is only found in the extreme interior of the country, and the natives there call it "Zarr Zarr." It is a wonderful cure of kidney and liver diseases, also, dyspepsia, neuralgia and rheumatism. We have a whole library full of testimonials. Sold by GENTLEMEN: Your remedy, the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has been used by both my wife and myself. She used it as a general principle, as a system and liver regulator; I took the medicine for a long-standing liver trouble, which has been the source of much inconvenience, and which failed to yield to the doctor's remedies, or any other, until I used your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. We both unite in pronouncing it to be the best medicine ever used, and in recommending it to others as a safe remedy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

An exchange says that the greatest mistake made by advertisers is in waiting until the season for marketing their goods is upon them. Then they rush into print, and the purchaser is on the way home with a wagonload of goods, when he calls at the country postoffice, and gets his paper containing a glaring advertisement of goods of another make, that would have suited him better, if he had only known it in time.

The Carson Tribune has dropped the stock report.

The Eureka papers charge 50 cents a week.

Parted Her Mooring Cables.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 11.
Last night while a heavy gale was blowing, the large French iron bark Ironet Marie, lying at Green street slip, where she was exposed to the fury of the wind, parted her mooring cables. She was driven violently across the slip against the ship Imperial. In the collision the Ironet Marie carried away her chain plates, and was badly crushed on her port side. The Imperial, a fine wooden ship, suffered a greater damage, being badly crushed from the starboard bow to the mizzen rigging. The damage to the vessels is above the water line, and can be repaired without much delay.

This afternoon the schooner Sarah, while tacking off near the sea wall, missed her stays and was driven by the gale against the wharf and sunk. The crew was rescued. She will be a total loss.

Another Collision.

CHICAGO, January 14.
The Evening Journal's Elkhardt, Indiana, special says: Last night at Mill's station there was a terrible wreck, caused by the collision of the Baltimore and Ohio train being run into by the Lake shore train. The cars, engines, telegraph office and track were nearly demolished. The trains are all delayed up to this date, i. e. m. No lives reported lost.

Will Recover.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 14.
Ella Reed, who on New Year's Eve was shot by her father after he had shot and killed his mother-in-law and subsequently shot himself, has so far recovered from the effect of the injury that the attending physician pronounces her out of danger.

Secretary Hunt sent a cablegram this afternoon to Lieutenant Danenhof and Chief Melville of the Jeanette at Ikotaki, through Minister Hoffman at St. Petersburg, asking them to remain on the ground till the remainder of the expedition is found and to help search by every means in their power.

Deadly Dentistry.

Mrs. John Ninola, of Grass Valley, went into a dentist's office on Thursday, and inhaled two teaspoonfuls of chloroform. The doctor pulled out five teeth, and just as he finished the lady seemed to be strangling. She raised from the chair and remedies were applied, but she died in a few minutes.

A Hopeful Prospect.

The Enterprise, speaking of Judge Marshall's mine on the hill among the red hills north of town, says: "This may turn out to be a valuable discovery, for many of the richest gold mines in California have been found in reddish-colored rock. Such a formation is always soft, yielding readily to the pick."

Cattle Shipment.

J. D. Byers, of Lassen county, Cal., this morning shipped to Oakland 180 head of choice beefs, it being his third shipment, amounting to 660 head, thus clearing out the cattle he bought to feed. He has yet to ship a few hundred head of his own raising. Mr. Byers is one of Lassen's solid men.

More Particulars of the New York Central Railway Disaster—Two New York State Senators Among The Killed.

NEW YORK, January 13.

The Chicago express train, leaving Albany at 2.40 this afternoon, with many members of the Legislature on board, was run into by a Tarrytown special train about a quarter of a mile east of Spayten Duvall Junction with the Harlem mail line. The two rear cars, Wagner's drawing-room car, of the Chicago express, were telescoped and set on fire. It is reported that seven bodies were taken from the wreck. It is feared that Senator Wagner is burned, as he was last seen entering the drawing-room car at Idlewild, a few minutes before the collision.

The following telegram was received at police headquarters at King's Bridge by Superintendent Walling at about 7.30 p. m.: The Tarrytown train ran into the rear of the special express at Spuyden Duvall, destroying two cars by fire, with a loss of life. Notify the coroner and send an ambulance. (Signed), PETER YALE, Captain.

Every available ambulance has been sent to the scene of the accident from the Bellevue, Ninety-ninth street and New York hospitals. It is reported that George F. Spiny, the Albany correspondent of the New York Times, was killed.

At 11.45 to-night Sergeant Doyle, of the Thirty-fourth Precinct, sent a telegram to headquarters that nine dead bodies had been recovered. Twelve persons are supposed to have been killed.

NEW YORK, January 14.

Spinney and Lyman, contractors, were enclosed in the telegraph. A portion of the roof fell down, enclosing them as if in a box, from which there seemed no escape. Axes were brought into speedy use, and inside of the car a hole was cut, and through this all were dragged out. George Wm. Curtis was also rumored to be among the killed, but at a late hour it is understood that he escaped.

Following is the list of dead so far as could be learned at 1 a. m.: Senators Webster and Wagner, E. L. Crawford of the Hoffman House, Park Valentine of Remington, Vermont, and Mrs. Park Valentine. A woman, supposed to be from Philadelphia, was injured, Oliver B. Kelly of Springfield, Pa., fatally injured, and Mary Daniels of New York badly injured.

Everyone in the Albany train seemed to be out of it, except some ten or twelve who seemed to be held in the back part of the car, which was all in flames.

The body of Senator Wagner has been recovered and brought here. He suffered a horrible death of burning.

Henry S. Roekenbaugh, a passenger describes the collision as something dreadful; he says the train stopped for some minutes, and he walked back to look out of the rear window in the last car, in which he was located. He saw the engine of the approaching train thundering around the curve, and turned to run back to the forward end of the car, shouting as he ran toward a fellow passenger, "there is danger!" All started from their seat. Before he had passed half through the car the shock came, and he felt himself lifted up in the air. Pitch darkness followed on all sides, and cries of horror, anguish and despair went up; then a lurid glow was cast through the car from the fire. He ran out and saw men and women struggling to get free from the wreck. He heard a lady, wedged in under a seat, calling most piteously for help. He tried to aid her, but she was held fast, and the fire compelled him to leave her to her terrible fate.

I suppose the shock tore the cars all to pieces, and that they were caught in between the broken seats. I could only see one woman at first, and she was lying down with a stove on one leg and arm. Her shrieks were horrible. The conductor on our train, who was the only one around that had his wits about him, immediately broke one of the windows, and two men were helped into the window to get her out.

With difficulty two more women and men were taken out, apparently fatally injured. There were several more in the cars. While I was walking through the crowd I saw a woman with a baby in her arms badly cut by glass, and the blood was dripping over her child. She had been in the forward part of the rear parlor car. The accident was due to the carelessness of the man in charge of the Albany train. It had no signal out, and the first intimation our engineer had of danger was when he saw the lights of the drawing-room car about fifty feet in front of him. The coaches took fire immediately.

He recollected seeing a stout lady, who was identified as a Miss or Mrs. Brown, get out of the cars at Greenbush.

Senator Wagner's remains were sent down to the city among the first in one of the dead Senator's own palace cars. Two hours later the remaining seven bodies were brought down, accompanied by Capt. Hall and Coroner Knox. Six of the bodies were packed in ice boxes, and the charred remains of the seventh was borne on a stretcher covered by a fur-lined cloak of Mrs. Valentine, the young bride whose wedding tour ended in such a horrible death.

The car was switched off on a side track east of the depot of the old freight station. At 43d street the coffins were arranged on the floor, and upon hastily improvised tables were spread the dragged and burned garments and satchels recovered from the wreck to serve as means of identifying unrecognizable bodies.

Rev. F. Maichel's body like all the others, with the single exception of that of Mrs. Orr and Miss Brown was burned so as to be unrecognizable. As the bodies were identified a sheet of paper marked with the name and number was tacked to the coffin lid and the name checked off on the list.

Reminders of the wreck were seen on every side, terrible and sickening in the extreme. Officials at the Grand Central Depot exhibited their usual exasperating official ignorance, and referred the question to higher authority. Up to noon some of them said they had barely heard of the accident by rumor, etc. Higher officers could not bother with reporters, and haughtily refused to talk.

THE ASSASSIN.

One Day More Gone—His Disgusting Gabbles Will Soon Cease.

WASHINGTON, January 14.
Guiteau opened the day's proceedings with the following: I received thirty checks yesterday representing about fifteen thousand dollars some of them are worthless and many are no doubt good, I don't want any one to send me worthless checks. I do my own banking business and my checks should be made out to my order. Any one who desires to send me money can do so but I don't want any worthless checks.

Scoville addressed the court stating he desired to know whether the prisoner would be allowed to speak in his own defense, if the court proposed to accord him that privilege. Both he (Scoville) and Reid should prefer he should speak first.

Guiteau—I want to be heard on that question your Honor. I want to close the argument for the defense. I would not trust my case in the hands of the best lawyer in America.

Judge Cox said: I should be loath in a capital case to deny any man a proper opportunity to be heard, even if he is represented by counsel, but in this case it is safe to assume that the prisoner will abuse the privilege, as he has done all through the trial, and that what he would say would be highly improper to go before the jury. I shall therefore deny him the privilege. As I said yesterday, however, if his counsel desires to read from his manuscript anything which they deem proper to be laid before the jury they can do so.

Guiteau protested. He said he appeared as his own counsel, and claimed the right, as an American citizen, to be heard in his own case. Finding that Judge Cox could not be moved, he shouted: "Let the record show that I appear here as my own counsel, and that I take exception to your ruling, Judge Cox. I shall appeal to the American people, and they will overrule you, and you shall go down to future ages with a black stain on your name."

Judge Cox made no reply to this tirade, but simply nodded to Reid to begin his argument.

Reid then arose to address the jury on behalf of the prisoner. He commenced by paying a compliment to the jury for their seriousness, solemnity and care which had characterized it during this long trial—a trial unparalleled in the history of criminal jurisprudence. He said he should not endeavor to make any statement of evidence or to draw a gilded picture of any scene, but he would simply talk with them as between neighbors. Davidge, counsel for the prosecution, had occupied two days in addressing the jury, and that effort and consumption of time on his part showed the grave apprehension felt by the prosecution lest something might have appeared in the case which would make the jury say, "This poor man is a lunatic and irresponsible."

Before Reid had been speaking half an hour, Guiteau's interruptions became frequent. He contradicted, commented, and made wicked comparisons. Reid alluded to the evidence of J. W. Guiteau.

The prisoner said despairingly—Well, he ain't my reference. I've got better men than he is, for my reference. The prisoner denied the evidence alluded to by Reid, that he struck his father at the table, and said he was a peaceable man, and didn't fight. If he didn't like anyone he told them to get out, and that settled it.

Reid said that probably the prisoner had forgotten that act.

Guiteau—That's owing to my poor, weak mind and disordered intellect. Reid said Judge Porter had said that Guiteau struck his father on the back, while the evidence says on the neck or shoulder. Davidge don't go back on the witness.

Reid failed to see the pun, but Guiteau called attention to it and said it would require a microscope to see it.

Reid—It does not require an expert to pronounce a man insane. You have seen them day after day shuffling right in before you; you have seen that strange unnatural look of his eyes, it requires the opinion of no expert, to convince you that this is not the appearance of a sane man. Continuing in this strain the speaker said in my opinion if this poor creature is sent to the asylum he will be a driving idiot in six months.

Guiteau had been quietly listening with his elbows on his knees, his back being turned to the audience and his attention apparently fixed on something in the street. This startling prediction aroused him intensely. Turning around he looked over in the direction of the speaker and enjoyed quite a laugh for some seconds.

"These experts," said the speaker, "don't swear to a fact, for none but the deity can know what there is in an insane brain of man. They swear only to their opinion, and you have a notable instance of how far from the facts the opinions of the most learned doctors may lead in the sad case of the late President. We had bulletins every day giving the opinions. We had an announcement that the probe, or whatever it may be, had been inserted twelve inches into the wound, and the wound really in an exactly opposite direction. I say it would be a shame to send a man to the gallows on the opinions of doctors."
